

HOPPER LECTURE

RESTLESS EARTH

Money, digital technology and political entropy around the world

Nanjala Nyabola

Kenyan writer
Political analyst
Researcher
Activist

“Without online diversity, only a handful of people will dictate the fate of the world.”

Nanjala Nyabola is an independent writer and researcher based in Nairobi, Kenya. Nyabola’s work focuses on the intersection between technology, media, and society.

OCTOBER 9, 2024

4:00 P.M. – 6:00 P.M.

VIRTUAL & IN-PERSON

Free admission. Registration required.

uoguelph.com/Hopper-2024

Sponsored by the International Development Research Centre (IDRC) in honour of its first president, David Hopper.

